Study: Health worsens after immigrating

HEART The stressful process of settling down in a new country may be putting Canadian immigrants at risk for health problems down the road, according to a new study.

While many move to Canada with healthy hearts, the study revealed the longer they remain in the country, the worse their cardiovascular health becomes — surpassing the heart disease risks of others of the same ethnic backgrounds born in Canada.

In the study, researchers measured atherosclerosis — or narrowing of the artery. Focusing on the carotid artery, which carries blood to the head and neck, they found the longer an immigrant had lived in Canada, the greater the thickening of the arterial wall.

"The speculation is that it might be the stress associated with coming to a new country," said Dr. Scott Lear, lead author of the study and kinesiologist at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver. "Finding a place to live, establishing financial security ... health can be secondary or even much lower down on the priority (list.)" THE CANADIAN PRESS

Manhunt on for slaying suspect

Man sought in weekend shooting called 'extremely violent'

An "extremely dangerous" Toronto resident is the subject of a Canada-wide police manhunt following the weekend shooting death of a young woman innocently taking a smoke break outside a Queen Street East tavern.

Kyle Weese, 25, is an "extremely violent man with an extremely violent history" who is well-known to police in 55 Division, Det.-Sgt. Gary Giroux of the homicide squad said yesterday as an arrest warrant was issued.

Bailey Zaveda, 23, died of gunshot wounds to the torso early Saturday morning as she stood outside the Duke of York tavern having a cigarette. A man started firing a semi-automatic pistol near the front doors during a dispute with another man. Four other bystanders were injured and have been released from hospital.

Suspect Kyle Weese

Zaveda had nothing to do with the altercation, Giroux said. "She was out for a night of entertainment and (now) she's not coming home."

Howard Johnson, president of Veracap Corporate Financing in Toronto, where Zaveda worked as a marketing co-ordinator, said co-workers were "all shocked and deeply saddened by this tragic loss."

"We will remember Bailey as both a cheerful and dedicated employee, as well as a kind-hearted friend," he said.

Zaveda's mother, of Brockville, last night was said to be too upset to speak on her daughter's slaying.

Giroux said Weese has a lengthy criminal record and is prohibited from owning weapons. He said Weese, a longtime Toronto resident, was not out on bail.

"He has been a dangerous person for a long time. He is going to be caught, so the best thing for him to do is surrender himself to the nearest police station."

"We will remember Bailey (Zaveda) as both a cheerful and dedicated employee, as well as a kind-hearted friend."
Howard Johnson, victim's employer

By last night several people had set bouquets near the shooting scene in memory of Zaveda.

Witnesses, Giroux said, "still have an obligation to the deceased and her family," and appealed for anyone with information to call police. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Infighting erupts in McCain, Palin camps

ELECTION Facing a deft assault by Democrats and widescale rejection by voters, John McCain and Sarah Palin are circling the wagons and firing inwards at each other with just nine days until the U.S. election.

The tattered remains of their ticket were everywhere yesterday, with both McCain and Palin insiders publicly on the attack to hold the other side responsible for their candidate's woes on the campaign trail.

"She is a diva — she takes no advice from anyone," an unnamed McCain adviser told CNN over the weekend. "She does not have any relationships of trust with any of us, her family or anyone else."

Those close to Palin, however, say she has simply tried to break free of a McCain campaign that terribly mishandled her, making her the butt of international jokes in the process.

"Her strategy was to be trustworthy and a team player during the convention and thereafter, but she felt completely mismanaged and mishandled and ill-advised," a close Palin ally told the Politico website. "Recently, she's gone from relying on McCain advisers who were assigned to her to relying on her own instincts."

In recent weeks, Palin has publicly parted ways with the McCain campaign on various fronts, leading many to speculate she is attempting to forge her own identity in preparation for a run for the White House in 2012.

Downtown Mississauga trailing

Downtown Mississauga may have easy access to the GTA' s largest highways and be only a quick jaunt from the airport, but such conveniences aren't enough to keep its assessment increases from falling curiously below the city's average. The average assessment increase of 4.48 per cent for next year puts central Mississauga's residential areas a full percentage point below the municipality's average. The likely culprit? A growing number of condominiums, according to Jeff Jackson, Mississauga's director of revenue and material management. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Train death unnecessary: Cops

Woman killed after apparently ignoring signals, tripping on tracks

It could have been prevented.

That is what Toronto police and Canadian Pacific Railway representatives are saying after a 20-year-old woman died when she was struck by a train as her sister and a friend looked on.

The three apparently ducked under a lowered railway-crossing arm around 11:30 p.m. Saturday, ignoring the flashing lights, on Denison Road East near Jane Street and Weston Road.

"The train barricade arm came down and for whatever reason, the three of them decided to circumvent that barricade," said Sgt. Tim Burrows of traffic services.

"It's just something as simple as trying to save a few seconds that cost one of them their lives. They would have had to wait less than 20 seconds." Sgt. Tim Burrows

The three women made it across one set of tracks, but as they tried to make their way across a second, the victim tripped and was run over by a two-car CP freight train.

Burrows said the woman's family, who lives close by, rushed to the scene to identify her body but have asked police not to release her name.

"This is a stark and vivid reminder of why there are rules ... It's just something as simple as trying to save a few seconds that cost one of them their lives," Burrows said "They would have had to wait less than 20 seconds." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Volunteers search for Barrie teen

The wind-reddened faces of volunteers searching for Brandon Crisp betrayed the optimism of their words.

"We're all out here desperately trying to find something that will help the police, but I think we're also afraid of what we might find," said Lynne Kongkham, 58, who left her Newmarket real estate business yesterday to join hundreds of volunteers in the search for the 15-year-old Barrie boy.

It's been two weeks since Brandon left home after a spat with his parents over an online video game.

Kongkham was on the last busload of volunteers heading out from Burl's Creek Park, headquarters for the search organized by staff of the Barrie Advance, where Brandon's mother works.

Volunteers battled harsh winds, rain and wet snow to search the Lake Simcoe shoreline, farm fields, ditches and forests.

Sgt. Dave Goodbrand said police have received thousands of tips from across North America. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Halloween event attracts families

HIGH PARK Michelle Wilson made the drive in from Lindsay to watch her two grandsons carve pumpkins before floating them on the wading pool at High Park yesterday. Wilson and her family were among the more than 100 High Park residents and other participants who converged on the park to take part in the pumpkin float. The event allowed parents and their toddlers to carve pumpkins, place a light inside and sail them on the wading pool. The children were also treated to creepy Halloween stories about witches, vampires and scary monsters. Robin Sorys, one the organizers, said the pumpkin float started a decade ago as a fundraiser to help build the Jamie Bell Adventure Playground in the park. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Neighbourhood in shock over homicide

In her 35 years in the Alexis Boulevard/Hammell Street neighbourhood, Grace had never had a Sunday like yesterday, when she found a dead man behind the wheel of a car.

"I thought maybe he had a heart attack and needed help. That's why I called the police," she said. "I didn't see any blood at all. I just kept calling out to him, 'Sir. Sir.'"

The victim, whom she described as a "very good-looking" man in his 30s, was the 61st person this year to die of homicide in Toronto. He was found in the driver's seat of a grey, 2006 Infiniti parked near a hedge on the west side of Hammell Street, sitting back against the seat, hands in his lap, his head tilted slightly toward the passenger door.

Supporters greet Peter Tabuns at a rally yesterday where the NDP MPP for Toronto-Danforth announced he will be running for the leadership of the provincial party.

Tabuns to run for NDP chief

Peter Tabuns, former head of Greenpeace Canada and MPP for Toronto-Danforth, has launched his bid for the leadership of the provincial New Democratic Party.

Tabuns, 57, threw his hat in the ring yesterday before an energetic group of supporters, declaring that he will build a "new energy economy" in Ontario.

As leader, he said his top priorities would be creating jobs and dealing with what he called the environmental crisis.

"What we need to present ourselves as much more is a party of solutions. We have to have a very clear, big picture of what it's going to take to future-proof Ontario," Tabuns told reporters after the rally. "And that's going to mean taking on the environmental issues and a more activist government."

Standing behind Tabuns are several labour council heads, CUPE Local One, and people within the South Asian and Chinese communities, along with environmental and social justice activists, he said.

"An appeal to the younger voter, an appeal to those whose major concerns are jobs and the environment, not either or, that's what Peter (Tabuns) represents."
MPP Cheri DiNovo

Rookie Toronto MPP Cheri DiNovo said Tabuns has what it takes to become premier.

"(He) has the green credibility ... and he also has the economic credibility. He represents a step forward, a real positive program for the NDP," she said. "An appeal to the younger voter, an appeal to those whose major concerns are jobs and the environment, not either or, that's what Peter represents." THE CANADIAN PRESS

SIU stays silent on crash

The province's Special Investigations Unit, harshly criticized last month for being "toothless" and stingy with information while probing violent incidents involving police, refused yesterday to release any details about a car accident early Saturday in north Toronto.

Police said a car crashed into a house on Grantbrook Street, near Finch Avenue West and Yonge Street, shortly after midnight on Saturday. Two people were injured in the crash.

But police could not offer any more information because the SIU had been called to investigate.

The SIU repeatedly refused over the weekend to release information.

The silence comes less than a month after Ontario Ombudsman André Marin slammed the SIU saying that both internal staff and the public have called them "toothless."

Yesterday, Sgt. Tim Burrows, of the traffic services unit — the Toronto police division that normally investigates serious crashes — said his team was not called in to look into the incident. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Youth crime probed

Some question power of such reports, doubt action

Just last week, at virtually the same time a 15-year-old was charged with murdering Brampton teenager Rajiv Dharamdial, government printing presses were gearing up to publish a major new report on preventing youth crime.

Commissioned last year by Premier Dalton McGuinty after 15-year-old Jordan Manners was shot dead in a Toronto school, the report examines the "root causes" of youth criminal behaviour. It represents months of work by Roy McMurtry, Ontario's former chief justice, and former Liberal cabinet minister Alvin Curling.

While McMurtry doesn't doubt the sincerity of McGuinty or his cabinet in wanting to do something about youth crime, a lowering of expectations might be prudent.

Officials assume there will be little political fallout from ignoring recommendations that arise from inquiries, said Joe Wamback, who attended a "candidates' school" while running for federal Conservative office.

"One thing they told us is, 'If you really screw up and it hits the paper, don't worry about it: the public's memory is 48 hours.'"

Winnipeg battles crime, poverty in revamp effort

It was a situation symptomatic of the problems Winnipeg faces in its long-standing effort to revitalize its downtown.

As business leaders gathered this past week to discuss ways to convince more residents to live, eat and shop in the city centre, Statistics Canada released a report highlighting one of the main reasons many suburbanites stay away — the city's high crime rate.

Winnipeg is not alone in trying to stop the daily exodus of downtown workers fleeing to their suburban homes after 5 p.m., but the issue is worse than in other cities. Winnipeg has the third-highest percentage of residents who work downtown in Canada, but only two per cent of residents live there.

The major downtown roadways bear few pedestrians after dark. Those that remain sometimes contend with aggressive panhandlers — a problem that prompted the city to pass a controversial bylaw banning begging in certain areas such as bus stops and bank machines.

"The big solution in terms of perception of safety is to get more people in your downtown, not only during the day, but at night," says Dave Angus, the president of the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce.

Angus dreams of a downtown much like those of Vancouver and Montreal, which buzz with people out for a meal or a drink virtually every night of the week. Getting more apartments and condo buildings in the core is the key, he says.

Iran's president falls ill

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has fallen ill due to exhaustion brought on by his heavy workload, the state-run news agency reported, quoting a close associate. The announcement comes as doubts have surfaced over whether Ahmadinejad, who faces strong criticism from opponents, will seek re-election next year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Livni gives up coalition bid

The leader of Israel's ruling Kadima party, Tzipi Livni, gave up her attempts to form a coalition government yesterday, setting the stage for early elections and diminishing hopes for stalled peace talks with the Palestinians.

Now Israeli opposition leader Benjamin Netanyahu, a critic of the peace process, is in a strong position to become the country's next leader. It would be the third national election in six years, reflecting the instability of Israel's political system.

Livni, who hopes to become Israel's first female prime minister in three decades, has been trying to put together a government since she replaced the corruption-tainted Prime Minister Ehud Olmert as head of the Kadima party last month. But partners in the current coalition pressed new demands.

Livni said she did everything she could to keep the government intact, but would not give in to what she termed political blackmail.

McCain faces uphill battle in final stretch

ELECTION Republican John McCain declared, "I'm going to win it," dismissing polls showing him behind Democrat Barack Obama with little more than a week to go in the U.S. presidential race.

Heading into the final nine days of the 2008 contest, the rivals campaigned in key battlegrounds that President George W. Bush won four years ago as the state-by-state Electoral College map tilts strongly in Obama's favour.

Democrats and Republicans alike say it will be difficult for McCain to change the trajectory of the campaign.

In the coming days, both candidates will focus on Bush-won, vote-rich states like Ohio and Florida, which decided the last two presidential elections and could do so again.

Pennsylvania is the only state that Democrat John Kerry won four years ago that both candidates are expected to visit before election day.

Trouble for Palin?

- Vice-presidential candidate Sarah Palin's signature accomplishment – a contract to build a 2,760-kilometre pipeline to bring natural gas from Alaska to the lower 48 states – emerged from a flawed bidding process that narrowed the field to TransCanada, a Canadian company with ties to her administration, an Associated Press investigation says.

Afghan hostages freed

Two high-profile Afghan kidnapping victims were freed by intelligence officials in Kabul yesterday after being discovered in a well where their captors had kept them, officials said.

Captors had demanded $5 million US each for Humayun Shah Asifi, a presidential candidate in the country's 2004 elections, and a second hostage, the son of the owner of a major bank chain, said Amrullah Saleh, chief of Afghanistan's intelligence department.

The two, abducted separately, had been held for less than a week.

Officials arrested eight people suspected of being involved in the kidnappings, Saleh said.

500 guns exchanged for money in Harlem churches

NEW YORK Five Harlem churches collected hundreds of weapons — in exchange for cash.

Rifles, handguns and shotguns were handed over on Saturday — no questions asked. Each person who brought a firearm was handed a $200 bank card. By late Saturday, more than 500 were collected.

It's part of a program sponsored by the NYPD and the Manhattan district attorney's office to remove weapons from city streets with recent spikes in violence. BB guns and air pistols were accepted in exchange for a $20 bank card.

So far, the buyback program, started a half-dozen years ago, has succeeded in removing about 5,000 guns from New York streets.

Opera Night in Canada?

Break out the Styrofoam fingers and face paint. Grab a seat at your local pub. It's time to celebrate the start of hockey season. Unless, of course, you live in Toronto.

Fellow Torontonians, I want to address a serious and crushing problem that's caused longstanding heartbreak in our city. I don't mean gun violence or not being able to get the U.S. Super Bowl ads. Those are bad. I'm speaking of the fact that it's Week 4 and once again our team is playing like visually-impaired garden slugs.

I, for one, have had it with jokes like, "Hear about the guy who was afraid he'd contracted listeriosis after kissing the Stanley Cup? Fortunately, he realized nothing Maple Leaf had touched it in 41 years."

There's a solution. We'll abandon all forms of hockey and take up the arts.

I didn't say it was a great solution.

Consider the benefits. They hardly ever hold ballet performances in drafty arenas at 5 a.m. And the symphony will never expect you to shell out $180 for a jersey just because it's got the name of the first violinist on it.

Here are some tips to get you started:

Modern art: Do not wander around the gallery saying loudly, "My two-year-old paints as well as that." This is disrespectful. And not just to two year olds.

"Don't say, 'I'm gunna see a play.' Intone, 'I'm attending the theatre.' If you pronounce it 'Th-EE-a-tuh' it's even better."

An artist friend insists that to appreciate modern art, we must imagine what the artist was feeling when they were creating. I tried this and thought, "Perhaps he had a very bad experience … with a radish," and, "maybe her medication hadn't kicked in yet."

On a recent visit, my daughter, Jade, and I saw an amazing piece of art. A single black line on a blank wall. Obviously representing the stark isolation of modern life. We stood admiring the work right up until a janitor arrived with Windex to, "Clean that ink mark off the wall." We decided to call this performance art.

Theatre: Don't say, "I'm gunna see a play." Intone, "I'm attending the theatre." If you pronounce it "Th-EE-a-tuh" it's even better. Avoid experimental plays. I saw Hamlet performed as a one-man show. It got very confusing when the actor playing all the parts had to keep jumping up and stabbing himself.

So, goodbye Leafs. We're out. Done. Finito. We're over hockey. It's Opera Night In Canada now. Unless, of course, they win this week.

Invest in future of Canadian children

Something fell off the radar screen in the last election: Our children.

Discussions of national child-care policy and early childhood education mostly evaporated when the markets crashed. But in tough times, support for young families is one of the best long-term investments Canada can make. (And I'm not talking about a token, souped up "baby bonus").

Companies understand their ability to attract and retain workers, particularly young women, depends on support for working parents. More than 65 per cent of women with children under the age of five work outside the home, fuelling an acute need for quality options.

Last week, an Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) study reminded us that the gap between rich and poor in Canada has increased dramatically over the last 10 years. Hardest hit? Young people and families with children. Canada is now below average among high-income countries in its social investments.

Investments in early childhood education and child care fuel economic and social development. They allow parents to choose to enter the labour force and improve their prospects. Many become trapped in a cycle of poverty because, quite simply, they cannot afford to work outside of the home. And we can also improve the prospects of children for later success also reducing social costs, particularly when children most at risk are targeted. The quality of life in Canada has long been a source of competitive advantage and we cannot allow it to be further eroded.

Many ask "Can we can afford the investment?" The better question, according to economists Gordon Cleveland and Michael Krashinsky, is "can we afford not?" Their cost/benefit analysis of child care concluded that we spend far less on young children than on older children, despite evidence that "the education of young children has greater payoff than dollars spent on the same children when they are older."

"The issues should be burning concerns, not just to parents of young children or advocates, but to political and business leaders."

Of course, we must not penalize parents who choose to stay home with their children, often at great cost (which, at least for me, was tougher than working for pay). And we need to find ways to direct resources to the people who need them most. But this should not distract us from action.

The issues should be burning concerns, not just to parents of young children or advocates, but to political and business leaders.

As Charlie Coffey, former executive vice-president, RBC Financial Group, insists, these are crucial investments in Canada's prosperity. In 2003, he wrote: "It's time for business to step up to the plate — it's time for our leadership voice to be heard ... In today's world, where education and skill levels determine future earnings, the economic and social costs to individuals, communities, and the nation of not taking action on early childhood education are far too great to ignore, especially when the benefits far outweigh the costs. It's never too early to invest in children — the bottom line is that early childhood education and care matters to business!"

Indeed, they should matter to us all.

The newly opened Nature of Diamonds exhibition at the Royal Ontario Museum is an exciting opportunity to see the world's third-largest cut diamond, an amazing geological and cultural artifact; but what about its social and political history?

While the actual route the "Incomparable Diamond" travelled, ethical or not, can probably never be discovered, at the very least it is a diamond in the company of so many other diamonds, which fuelled great violence and suffering.

The ROM has the privilege of helping to educate and inform us. In this current exhibit (sponsored by DeBeers, one of the world's largest diamond sellers), the ROM has an opportunity to raise awareness of the complicated and troubling reality of diamonds.

Not telling this story betrays the reality of diamonds in contemporary culture and promotes a misconception: It glorifies an item while ignoring its participation in the violation of human rights.

Tidings of price cuts

Retailers brace for painful holiday shopping

Canadian retailers are getting a dose of yuletide fear this fall as many of them slash prices early with anticipation that this holiday shopping season could be one of the most painful in recent memory.

Industry watchers expect the aggressive pricing to continue as the latest sales numbers suggest confidence is plummeting at an alarming rate.

"What retailers are trying to do is start the sales early ... before risking a sharper slowdown in spending later in the year," said BMO Capital Markets economist Sal Guatieri.

"What retailers are trying to do is start the sales early."
Sal Guatieri

Added to the mix is the loonie tumbling off of its record highs. However, for the short term, analysts say prices are expected to remain low on most items partly because retailers paid for their holiday merchandise months ago.

But many retailers are already reacting to the current position of the loonie for big ticket items — and some of the deals aren't particularly enticing for bargain hunters.

RESCUE The U.S. bailout is now the hottest lobbying game in town. Insurers, automakers and American subsidiaries of foreign banks all want the Treasury Department to cut them a piece of the largest government rescue in U.S. history. The Financial Services Roundtable wrote Treasury officials on Friday requesting that the initiative to buy $250 billion U.S. in bank stock grow to cover insurers, auto companies, securities dealers and U.S. subsidiaries of foreign companies, including banks.

Bills drop first divisional contest in Miami, rematch here Dec. 7

Dolphins 25, Bills 16

Ted Ginn Jr. had a breakout game yesterday with seven catches for a career-high 175 yards, and the Dolphins overcame a nine-point third-quarter deficit to beat Buffalo 25-16. Joey Porter had two sacks for Miami, including one to force a fumble for a safety. That was one of four turnovers by Buffalo, all in the fourth quarter. The Bills' unravelling down the stretch also included a fumble after a reception by Robert Royal, and a muffed punt by Roscoe Parrish.

GIANTS 21, STEELERS 14

When it seemed Pittsburgh had too much depth and defence for the Super Bowl champs, the Steelers were tripped up by a bad punt snap which led to a Giants safety. Eli Manning then threw a two-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Boss with 3:11 remaining for the Giants' only touchdown.

CHARGERS 37, SAINTS 32

A trans-Atlantic trip was just what Drew Brees and the New Orleans Saints needed to get their season back on track. Brees went 30-for-41 for 339 yards and three touchdowns against his former team to lead the Saints to a 37-32 win over San Diego at Wembley Stadium in London.

Elsewhere in the NFL it was: Cowboys 13, Bucs 9; Patriots 23, Rams 16; Eagles 27, Falcons 14; Jets 28, Chiefs 24; Redskins 25, Lions 17; Browns 23, Jaguars 17. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The forgiven

Mitch Williams embraced by Philly fans 15 years after Carter home run

Mitch Williams sits behind a broadcast table on the main concourse of Citizens Bank Park, eagerly talking baseball with fans who once egged his house.

Wearing a pinstriped suit, tie and designer eyeglasses, Williams looks more professorial than "The Wild Thing" of his former life. As he takes phone calls and explains why the Philadelphia Phillies will beat Tampa Bay in the World Series, about 20 people gather around and wait for a commercial break.

Then it's a free-for-all.

"Hey, Mitch, sign this please," a guy wearing a throwback Mike Schmidt jersey yells, handing Williams a ball.

"Can we take a picture with you?" a woman asks as she brings her two children around for a pose.

"You rock, dude," a somewhat-intoxicated fan screams while juggling two cups of beer.

Williams signs all the autographs, smiles for all the pictures and shakes all the hands, mixing in a few hugs. You'd never know this was the same guy who made an entire region weep the last time the Phillies played in the World Series.

The closer surrendered Joe Carter's bottom-of-the-ninth home run that ended Game 6 in 1993 and gave the Blue Jays their second straight championship. Williams received death threats, and eggs were tossed at his house after that defeat.

He never threw another pitch for the Phillies, exiled to Houston because then-general manager Lee Thomas didn't think Williams could handle coming back to a potentially hostile environment.

But fans quickly forgave the hard-throwing lefty with the out-of-control fastball. When Williams returned to Philadelphia for the first time with the Astros in May 1994, he got a standing ovation.

NICK LAHAM/GETTY IMAGES

Former Phillies pitcher Mitch Williams throws out the first pitch prior to a playoff game in Philadelphia this month.

"They were always great to me," Williams said. "They knew I never made excuses. If I screwed something up, I tried to go out the next night and fix it. It's the same thing with them. They don't have a great day at work every day, so they understand that."

Williams never asked to be traded after blowing the save in the Series. He wanted to stay with the Phillies no matter the pressure. Teammates appreciated his willingness to accept blame whenever he messed up. "The one thing I remember after Mitchy gave up that home run was he was accountable," said Pete Incaviglia, who played left field for the '93 Phils. "He didn't hide. He went right into the locker room and sat on that stool and waited for the media to come in.

"I think the city of Philadelphia, being the great city that it is, if guys are accountable, they'll forgive him. He said, 'You know what, I thought I made a good pitch to a good hitter and the guy hit it out of the ballpark and we lost the game.' It was that simple."

Chief rebukes Thomas

A suburban police chief likened the conflicting accounts of an accidental overdose at Isiah Thomas' home to a "cover-up" and rebuked the former New York Knicks coach Saturday for saying it was his teenage daughter who required treatment.

Thomas

"It wasn't his daughter," Harrison Police Chief David Hall told The Associated Press. "And why they're throwing her under the bus is beyond my ability to understand."

Authorities were called early Friday to Thomas' suburban New York home, where police said a 47-year-old man was taken to the hospital and treated for an overdose of sleeping pills. Several media outlets reported that police confirmed it was Thomas who went to the hospital.

But reached on his cellphone Friday, the 47-year-old former Raptors GM told the New York Post he had not been treated for a sleeping pill overdose, and that it was 17-year-old daughter Lauren who had a medical issue.

It "wasn't an overdose," he told the newspaper. "My daughter is very down right now. None of us are OK."

Hall forcefully refuted Thomas' statement.

"My cops ... know the difference between a 47-year-old black male and a young black female," Hall said.

"These people should learn something from Richard Nixon — it's not the crime, it's the cover-up," he added.

Speak up for environment

ScienceMatters

David Suzuki & Dr. Faisal Moola

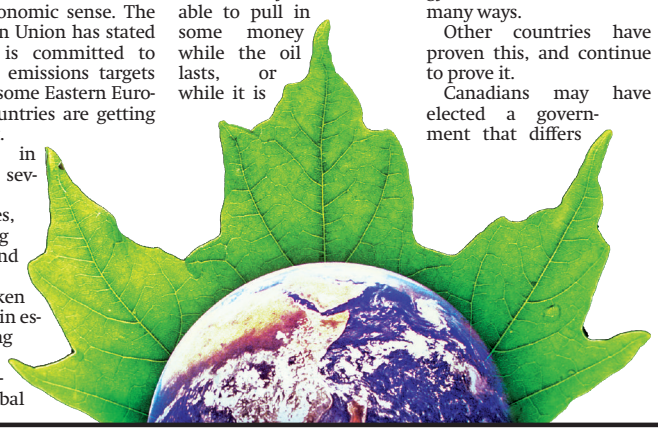
We've just had our federal election and, if nothing else, the environment did become an issue. Unfortunately, global warming and other environmental issues were overshadowed by an economic crisis and, no doubt, by the fear people have of the word tax, so much so that they didn't notice the word cuts was also in there.

Now it's up to all of us to make sure the environment doesn't get lost in all the noise about the economy. The new government has some important choices to make in the near future.

Although a few nations are putting plans to combat global warming on the back burner while they weather the economic crisis, many more are holding fast, realizing that protecting the environment makes good economic sense. The European Union has stated that it is committed to meeting emissions targets even as some Eastern European countries are getting cold feet.

Here in Canada, several provinces, including B.C. and Ontario, have taken the lead in establishing plans to combat global warming and to shift to a sustainable economy. But more needs to be done, especially at the federal level.

Continuing to rely on projects such as the Alberta tar sands to keep our economy afloat is a short-term strategy with long-term negative consequences for both the environment and the economy. Sure, we'll be able to pull in some money while the oil lasts, or while it is economically feasible to extract, or until the rest of the world has switched to renewable sources of energy, but then what?



If we start now to shift from reliance on dirty and non-renewable sources of energy to renewable sources, and if we put more effort into conserving energy, we will benefit in so many ways.

Other countries have proven this, and continue to prove it.

Canadians may have elected a government that differs little from the one we had before the election — and they may have even shown, through the votes they did cast and through the disappointing apathy that many demonstrated, that it was difficult to connect with the parties that made the environment the top priority. But we shouldn't conclude that the results of the election mean that the window of opportunity for government action on the environment has slammed shut.

A minority government such as the one we just elected has an even greater responsibility to listen to all our voices. We just have to speak loudly enough to be heard.

Metro survey finds warming a cause for concern

One-third of Metro readers are worried about global warming — in Sweden this rises to 46 per cent, according to a Metro World "green" survey.

Forty-five per cent are worried about the economic crisis and 22 per cent are most worried about crime.

The countries most worried about global warming are: Sweden (46 per cent); Denmark (39 per cent); France (37 per cent); Portugal (33 per cent); Hungary (32 per cent); Spain (31 per cent); Netherlands (31 per cent); Italy (30 per cent); and the U.S. (25 per cent). Numbers for Canada were not supplied.

To help the environment some things our readers do most regularly are: Shower instead of take a bath; switch lights off when leaving a room; and only use washing machines when there is a full load.

The top three things our readers wish they did to help the environment are: Keep electrical items switched off and not on standby; use reusable bags to carry shopping; and avoid unnecessary car trips.

The hardest things for our readers to do to help the environment are: Drink tap water rather than bottled water; and avoid unnecessary flights and car trips.

Hollywood, movie stars shining examples of going green

Celebrities are abandoning their gas guzzlers for Priuses. Movie studios are sending their film sets to the recycle bin. Thank the Environmental Media Association.

"An Inconvenient Truth created awareness about the environment," said EMA president Debbie Levin. "And Hollywood is very progressive."

That makes the EMA's task easier. The organization, which has worked to make Hollywood greener for 20 years, is now finding success everywhere. It was the EMA that convinced celebrities in the United States and Europe; designed a canvas bag as part of a national campaign to replace plastic bags; and convinced celebrities to buy those Priuses to set an example for lesser mortals.

Some of the EMA's favourite greens

Daryl Hannah: Lives a totally green lifestyle; owns a solar home; drives a bio-diesel car; is a vegan; and travels around the world as a strong advocate of environmental practices.

Rosario Dawson: Works on green causes including lending her name and image for a phone recycling campaign

Daryl Hannah lives a green life, including driving a Prius.

Cameron Diaz: One of the first celebrities to drive a Prius; a huge environmental advocate; involved in a "green" school program; insists that all her movies follow the EMA Green Seal Guidelines for Productions.

Leonardo DiCaprio: Drives a hybrid car; produced The 11th Hour; has extensive environmental information on his website.

"It used to be that messengers had to drive around Los Angeles and distribute every single draft of every single script," said Levin.

But making an environmentally-friendly movie is more difficult than buying a hybrid car: There are huge transportation needs, and recycling can be difficult in remote locations. The films that do succeed earn the EMA's Green Seal.

On Nov. 13, the EMA will hold its annual awards ceremony, where it recognizes TV shows and films that have a "green" message.

The ceremony itself? It's carbon-neutral, fuelled by bio-diesel, and serves organic food.

Watch them do it for the first time.

If you're lying, chances are Jennifer Ford-Smith can see right through you.

Warning to fraudsters everywhere: Watch out

OddJobs

"I've got a dead body! I've got a dead body!" Jennifer Ford-Smith cried out one day at work.

Her colleagues probably thought she had lost it. But Ford-Smith was used to people not quite getting her passion for sniffing out crime.

The dead body — found inside a home bought with a mortgage through the lending company she worked for — meant that the police would get involved with her investigation into the defaulted payments.

As a fraud examiner for a mortgage company, she investigates loans gone awry to see what went wrong (and maybe even get some of the money back) and trains staff to sniff out scams at the application stage.

Ford-Smith's crime sense started young: She adored math puzzles and mystery books and was able to tell if someone was lying. After studying international relations, she signed on with a temp agency that sent her to a bank's mortgage division to review applications.

She found one or two frauds a day. She flagged everything from faked government assessments to lies about income. Her colleagues in the same department didn't find nearly so many questionable applications.

"You're good at this," her boss said. Just two weeks later, the bank hired her permanently and moved her to the bank's audit department where she reviewed mortgage documents and did investigations. A few years later, a newly launched mortgage company hired her to start a fraud and audit department.

"When a mortgage company is new to the market, the word gets out amongst the criminal set, and they often try to attack it right at the beginning, when the controls are weak," says Ford-Smith.

She keeps on top of fraud trends — which she shares with staff at her company — by reading and talking to others in the industry, including the police.

Her biggest investigation surrounded the home in Montreal where the dead body was found. A biker gang was involved, as was cocaine, seeds for a grow op, human trafficking and other crimes. Ford-Smith spent months in an office with a lawyer combing through documents to figure out what went on. The fraud ended up totalling $3 million and is currently before the courts.

Ford-Smith, now 27, recently moved to another job, setting up yet another fraud and audit department at a new lender. About eighteen months ago, she completed her certification through the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners in Texas. She's now working on certification through the Association of Certified Anti-Money Laundering Specialists of Miami.

Diane Peters once hawked magic pens at the Canadian National Exhibition. She's now a writer and part-time journalism instructor.

Luxury hotels for small biz

RAFAEL BRUSILOW

A personal chauffer, a team of relaxation specialists, golf courses accessible from the lobby and a rentable pet companion are just some of the unique amenities Canada's top hotels are offering to attract the amenity-conscious small business traveller.

Hotels.ca recently compiled a list of Canada's top hotels for the small business traveller and found when it comes to distinctive services, travellers have some truly extraordinary choices.

"There are a lot of great hotels across Canada and they're all really cutting edge," said Anita Chau, senior marketing manager for Hotels.ca.

Chau says the key to fulfilling small business needs is offering 24-hour access to business technologies like computers and wireless Internet, convenient access to food and personal amenities and great business support for things like presentations and meetings. Most hotels do offer those perks, but some go a few steps further.

The W Montreal hotel offers a complimentary ride in an Acura SUV complete with personal driver to and from the airport as well as a team of "meeting specialists" that can swing by your business meeting to create a relaxing and fun break involving karaoke, oxygen bars or even yoga classes.

> "Coming home to animals is nice so that's a feeling the hotel wants to instill back into the hotel experience."
> Anita Chau

In Calgary, the Sheraton Suites Calgary Eau Claire offers perhaps one of the most unique amenities by letting the idea of comfort go to the dogs — or dog, to be more exact. Patrons feeling lonely or just missing their own pets can schedule quality time with Jake, a golden retriever who has his own doghouse in the hotel lobby, his own business cards and e-mail address. Jake is available to accompany guests on walks to the park and takes appointments online or through his own appointment book outside his lavish canine home in the lobby.

"Coming home to animals is nice so that's a feeling the hotel wants to instill back into the hotel experience," Chau said.

The Fairmont Vancouver Airport offers hotel check-in right outside the baggage carousels and a round-the-clock electronic monitoring service that automatically notifies staff when anything needs to be replaced in the room, while the Pan Pacific Hotel in the same city offers a 24-hour cyber-butler, a 42,000 square-foot meeting space and a dedicated spa.

The Brookstreet Hotel in Ottawa lets business travellers network and make deals in style or just take a break on one of two European PGA-approved short golf courses attached to the hotel.

In Toronto, the Hazelton Hotel offers five-star luxury complete with fully equipped business centres on every floor that include round-the-clock tech support while busy travellers staying at the Pantages Hotel can have the staff transform their guest room into a made-to-order meeting room in a hurry with just a quick phone call.

Seneca partners with India-based animation studio

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

In a country where the film industry is dominated by the Bollywood machine, how can fledgling visual artists hope to make their mark?

Toronto's Seneca College is hoping to answer that question.

Students from India will soon be able to learn animation, visual effects and gaming, half in their home country and half at the local polytechnic institution. A new agreement was signed earlier this month with Mumbai, India-based Frameboxx Animation & Visual Effects. It is set to provide Indian students the unique travel and study opportunity that will result in a Seneca graduate certificate upon completion.

Seneca's vice-president of international and business development Mohammed Ali Khan, who just returned from India, said the partnership with Frameboxx is ideal because of the industrial synergy they share with Seneca.

"Seneca is a leader in applied learning and one of the things we pride ourselves on is our close linkages with industry," said Khan. "Similarly, Frameboxx is not just a provider of training, but they're also a producer of animation. They really understand what the animation industry needs in terms of the skill sets, competencies and credentials."

Khan said the new program is inspired by a strong Indian economy, the nation's English language ability, its labour cost advantage and quality education system. And even though Bollywood reigns supreme, Khan maintained that animation — especially in Hindi and other regional languages — is a growing area.

"Indian animation firms and production houses are doing a lot of offshore work for Hollywood, western media and film companies," he said. "Many people see this as a stepping stone. If you get an internationally recognized credential and you have the hands-on experience to boot, you're well set for a job in the Middle East, the Far East, Singapore and even the U.S."

> "Seneca is a leader in applied learning ... we pride ourselves on our close linkages with industry."
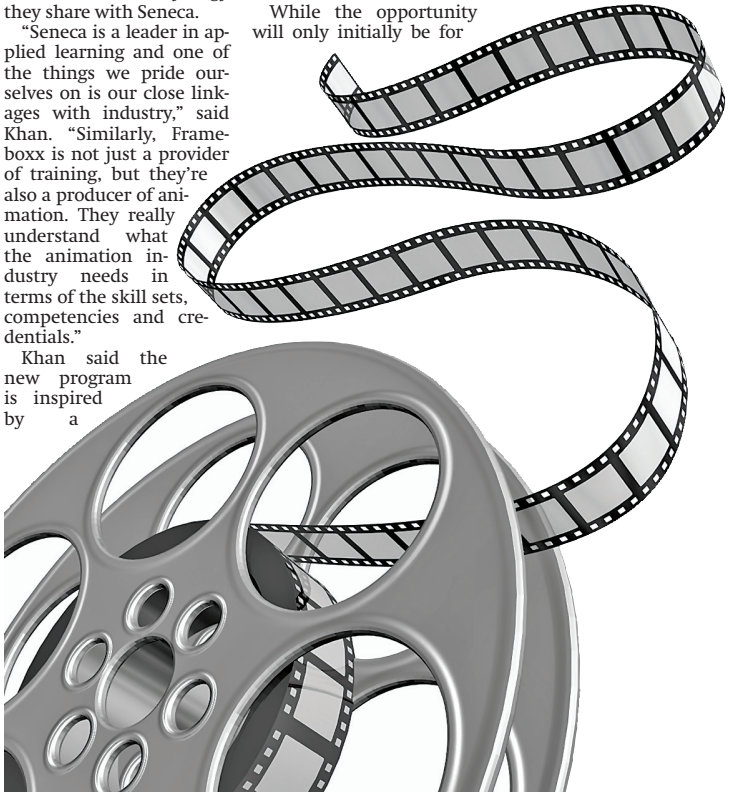
> Mohammed Ali Khan

While the opportunity will only initially be for Indian students coming to Canada, Khan said, pending success, Canadians might one day be able to complete part of a graduate certificate overseas. "If it works well and we're happy with the result, there's no reason we can't replicate this and offer it to our own Canadian students as well."

But even if Seneca students won't currently benefit from travelling overseas, Khan said the school will. "This is going to help to increase our visibility in India," he said. "That will be good for increasing the international exposure and awareness of our own students. We live in a global economy, so we're all connected now."



Seneca and India-based Frameboxx Animation & Visual Effects have teamed up to provide Indian students an opportunity to learn animation techniques in India and Canada.

Slow times for car dealers

Economic downturn magnified in auto industry

When times were good, Linda Teter kept 30 Chevrolet trucks on the narrow roadside show lots. Today, fewer than 10 gleam under the autumn sun. Next month, when snow comes to the Allegheny Mountains, there will be even fewer.

"You're lucky to sell maybe five a month now," she says, waiting at her desk for the phone to ring, the door to open. "The economy's so upside-down, people have no money. They're scared to buy."

With an unrelenting credit crisis, breathtaking swings in the stock market and mounting consumer anxiety, Teter now wonders if winter will ever end; she trusts that her conservative instincts will keep her in business, but there's no guarantee.

Last month, the biggest Chevy chain in the U.S. — Georgia-based Bill Heard Enterprises Inc. — went bust and closed 13 dealerships in six states. High gas prices and the other problems that thousands of small dealers face every day were magnified by its size — too much inventory and overhead, too few people qualifying for loans or even trying.

From triumph to tragedy

Chicago home that once nurtured Jennifer Hudson now harbours calamity

It was the cradle of her greatest triumphs, and now it's the scene of her darkest hour.

Oscar-winning actress and singer Jennifer Hudson has often credited her rise to fame to her upbringing in an impoverished neighbourhood on Chicago's South Side, where she went to grade school and sang in church.

At that church on Saturday, her sister pleaded for the safe return of her seven-year-old son, Julian, a day after the siblings' mother and brother were found shot to death at the family home.

"I don't care who you are, just let the baby go," Julia Hudson said to a crowd from the podium of the Pleasant Gift Missionary Baptist Church with the boy's father, Greg King, at her side. "I just want my son. He don't deserve this."

Authorities were holding a suspect with ties to the family, but no one had been charged.

The Hudsons, who have insisted on not allowing 27-year-old Jennifer's fame to alter their lives, lived in a three-storey white house bookended by vacant lots.

A grill and a bottle of mustard stood on the lawn over the weekend, remnants of the barbecues they were known to throw on birthdays and holidays.

"They wouldn't turn anyone away," said Bob Israel, who lives in the neighbourhood. "They didn't want to change a bit."

ASSOCIATED PRESS PHOTO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE, KIM HAKAMASH

Jennifer Hudson, right, and her mother, Darnell Donerson, are seen in this March 6, 2007, photo at the Chicago Theatre. Donerson and her son, Jason Hudson, were found dead on Friday.

An autopsy Saturday showed Darnell Donerson, 57, and Jason Hudson, 29, died of gunshot wounds, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office.

Their deaths were ruled homicides.

Police said a family member entering Donerson's home Friday found a woman's body on the living room floor. Officers later found Jason Hudson shot in the bedroom. At least one of the victims suffered defensive wounds, said authorities.

That same day, Julia Hudson reported Julian King missing.

Chicago police spokeswoman Monique Bond said no one had been charged. She has said that investigators were talking to "a number of people in custody."

Bond said the FBI had been called to help in the search for the boy on "the possibility or any theory that he could have been taken across state lines."

But, she added: "We have nothing to prove that."

Julia Hudson, 31, asked that the public look for her son, saying he answers to the nicknames Juice Box and Dr. King.

Hudson, who won an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actress in 2007 for her role in Dreamgirls, talked of the influence of her family often.

In a recent Associated Press interview, she said her family helped keep her grounded because her fame hasn't changed them.

"My faith in God and my family, they're very realistic and very normal, they're not into the whole limelight kind of thing," she said.

"So, when I go home to Chicago, that's just another place that's home. I stand in line with everybody else, or when I go home to my mom, I'm just Jennifer."

Search continues

- Chicago authorities are intensifying efforts to find the seven-year-old nephew of Oscar-winning actress Jennifer Hudson
- An Amber Alert remained in effect yesterday for Julian King, who disappeared from his South Side neighbourhood on Friday, the day the bodies of his grandmother, Darnell Donerson, 57, and 29-year-old uncle Jason Hudson were found in the home they shared. Their deaths were ruled homicides.

Oasis case in court next month

The case of a man charged with attacking Oasis guitarist Noel Gallagher at a Toronto festival is due back in court next month.

A man ran onto the stage during a performance at the Virgin Festival in early September and pushed Gallagher from behind.

Gallagher fell onto his speakers, bruising his ribs and hip.

He said later that he thought he had been stabbed.

Forty-seven-year-old Daniel Sullivan is charged with assault. His case will be back in court in Toronto on Nov. 25.

Rock band Oasis

Gallagher was still on pain medication for three broken and dislodged ribs at the start of the month.

The attack prompted Oasis to reschedule a performance in London, Ont., to Dec. 15. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cronenberg working on his first novel

PEOPLE Canadian director David Cronenberg is swapping his camera for a pen.

The moviemaker, who was attending the Rome Film Festival last week, said he has written 60 pages of a novel, but besides ruling out that it would be horror or science fiction, offered few details on the project.

"Based on the pages I have written we found publishers all over the world, which is very terrifying to me," Cronenberg said. "It's at a very delicate phase right now, so I can't really talk about it."

Bond tales peek inside the mind of the legend

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

He's got ladies, liquor and a licence to kill.

His name's Bond ... James Bond, that is, and his meticulous detection and personal drive are probed in Quantum of Solace: The Complete James Bond Short Stories by Ian Fleming. The nine-part anthology is the first in which Fleming's bibliography of Bond shorts is collected, including From a View to a Kill, Octopussy and the title story, Quantum of Solace.

Unlike their film adaptations, the stories within divulge far more of Bond's personal life and beliefs and aid in justifying his actions and purpose as a character.

From his introspective musings on what type of beverage is suitable to order at a restaurant in From a View to a Kill to his mental transition from covert to critical during periods of operative inactivity in The Property of a Lady, the stories lay bare Bond's thoughts.

But, that's not to say the stories aren't as loaded as a golden gun with action and adrenaline (both in and out of the bedroom). Fleming dodges the modern excess of violent spectacle by building up relationships and vicious runins in detail. The short stories act as a roadmap from which the cinematic adaptations draw, picking up pieces from the cutting room floor to generate a different, literary Bond prototype.

The collection is not suited for everyone, as it replaces quick on-screen cuts with concentrated biographical fiction and more elaborate explanation. But for those intrigued by the narrative behind the legend, this account's for your eyes only.

James Bond book-to-film adaptations:

TV's the deciding medium

IntelleVision

rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

"Obama looked so calm, cool and collected you half expected him to break into the opening strains of Summer Wind."

Mary McNamara, TV critic

LIVING IN THE PAST: I don't think it's just Mad Men that's got people jonesing for the stylistically superior early '60s, but here's the latest bit of evidence that we've started hitting the pre-Meet the Beatles era hard for explanatory metaphors.

It's an article of cultural and political conventional wisdom that Richard Nixon lost the 1960 election with the televised debate that aired on Sept. 26, 1960, in which he appeared nervous and haggard next to the poised, tanned JFK. Most recollections of that debate insist that radio listeners thought Nixon won the debate, but that TV viewers saw it differently, and that this was not only a watershed moment for the Kennedy campaign, but TV's decisive blow to radio as the dominant media.

In a commentary piece in Friday's Los Angeles Times, the paper's TV critic, Mary McNamara, compares that debate to the third and final presidential debate between Barack Obama and John McCain. "Obama looked so calm, cool and collected you half expected him to break into the opening strains of Summer Wind," writes McNamara, with the sort of partisan fervor that's set the tone for this campaign. "Meanwhile, McCain spluttered, blinked and twitched, possessed by a cacophony of physical tics that were, by turns, frightening and laughable."

Still, McNamara has to admit that, in the hours after the debate, pundits and blogs were conceding that McCain did well, but that the polls taken in the subsequent week gave Obama the clear victory. McNamara's point is that Obama is the more telegenic candidate — "He is tall and slim, which means he looks good in a suit. He is one of the few heterosexual American men who can appear comfortable while sitting on a stool. He has the wide, bright smile we demand of our movie stars ..."

It might be a fair assessment, but it still reads like it was written with hearts dotting the Is, and "Mary Obama, Mrs. Mary Obama, Mrs. Barack Obama" in the margins. There has, it must be said, been a lot of this sort of thing from journalists of both sexes this year.

McNamara's thesis is that television is still the deciding medium in this political race, exercising more palpable influence than the Internet, and that Obama's team has exploited this well. There is, of course, the persistent taint to JFK's 1960 victory that the agonizingly close race was won by votes bought by his father and rigging by the Chicago Democratic machine led by Mayor Richard Daley. With the promise of another close race, and rumours of rigging abounding already, it looks like the U.S. should brace itself for déjà vu all over again.

The Office turns to Winnipeg

SERIES The city of Winnipeg is getting ready for its next closeup.

The Manitoba capital is being featured on an upcoming episode of the television show The Office, when Steve Carell's cringe-inducing Michael Scott, and a few of his underlings, visit on a business trip.

Writers for the show — about the fictional paper firm Dunder Mifflin set in Scranton, Penn. — said they chose Winnipeg because it struck the right balance "between exotic and obscure."

Thankfully, for Winnipeggers tired of being the butt of jokes about the cold climate, the show didn't have the budget to splurge for mountains of fake snow, let alone film on location. Instead, the episode's Winnipeg scenes are set at the city's airport, a hotel and a bar — all filmed in Los Angeles with plenty of props.

Hudgens doesn't regret nude pics

CELEBRITY High School Musical star Vanessa Hudgens doesn't regret the world seeing naked images of her, despite it leaving her "traumatized," imdb.com reports.

Hudgens was at the centre of controversy when the full frontal shots, which she reportedly took for her boyfriend Zac Efron, appeared on the Internet. But despite the pictures' effect on her squeaky clean reputation, Hudgens insists she is a great believer in fate.

"I think that everything happens for a reason and I wouldn't take back anything that I've done," she says. "I don't like talking about it because it was something that was meant to be private and I'd still like to keep it as private as I can."

Damon wants daughters grounded

PARENTING Actor Matt Damon is determined his three daughters won't be spoiled by a lavish lifestyle, and plans to take them with him as he carries out charitable work in impoverished parts of the world, imdb.com reports.

The star has become well-known for his philanthropic efforts in Africa and around the world. And he wants Isabella, two, two-month-old Gia and stepdaughter Alexia, 10, to follow in his footsteps.

"It's a hard thing to explain to a kid. And it is also unbelievable the way other kids are forced to live," he says. "The way you have to parent them is to show them the world. Explaining the world can only go so far. You can read about devastation every morning … but when you actually go there and see it, you realize this isn't something you can turn the page on."

Posh and Becks' doc deal

DOCUMENTARY David Beckham and his former Spice Girl wife Victoria are set for a $16-million US payday if his planned move to Italy goes ahead — they will make a film of their new life, imdb.com reports.

The soccer player is lining up a move from Los Angeles to Europe to play on loan for AC Milan football club in January. If the transfer goes ahead, the celebrity couple will be offered the chance to make a documentary about their showbiz lifestyle.

Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi, who owns AC Milan, is said to be planning to offer the Beckhams $16 million for the film. Victoria made a similar documentary, entitled Victoria Beckham: Coming to America, covering their move to America when Beckham signed for L.A. Galaxy in July 2007.

"It will be similar in format to the U.S. documentary last year, but this time the budget is absolutely huge. It will be a really polished, professional production," a source tells Britain's Daily Mirror. "With Silvio 100 per cent behind the project, as part of his vision to expand the AC Milan brand, it really will be no holds barred."

Paparazzi scare Biel

FAME Actress Jessica Biel finds dealing with the paparazzi the hardest part of the celebrity lifestyle, insisting the ever-present photographers often drive her to tears, imdb.com reports.

Biel found herself a major media target when she began dating pop star Justin Timberlake in 2007.

"It's hard. The hardest part of this whole wonderful, bizarre lifestyle and profession," she tells Britain's Marie Claire magazine.

"You have to be Zen about it, because it can make you crazy. There are times when I have been followed by men with giant cameras in giant SUVs all day long. It scares … me and I literally come home and emotionally erupt and cry it out and sit on the floor and think, 'Do I really want this?'"

Joe's take on celebrities

His breakout Hollywood movie saw him play a sensitive but troubled übergenius with a social conscience, and now Good Matt Damon wants you all to know just how caring he really is. He swears his daughters won't become spoiled little celebspawn, indulging their every materialistic whim while remaining blissfully aware of the suffering in the world. What about my suffering, Damon, if I'm still writing this column in 16 years and your girls aren't providing fodder for me?

Matt says he's not just going to tell his daughters about the plight of the less fortunate, but will actually show them the suffering. Hopefully, this will include personally introducing them to everyone who paid money to see The Legend of Bagger Vance.

How much fun is it going to be for the girls? Isabella's going to want a piñata for her birthday party, but instead Damon will make her and the other kids work on a water-filtration prototype. Gia's going to get a trip to Burundi for her high school graduation present. Alexa will have to go all Jason Bourne and liberate child labourers from a toy factory in China.

1/2 tsp (2 mL) salt
1/2 cup (125 mL) toasted Brazil nuts or blanched almonds, finely chopped
1/3 cup (75 mL) wheat germ
4 boneless skinless chicken breasts
2 tbsp (25 mL) olive oil
